

Report and Recommendation of the LMS Task Force

October 4, 2023

Blackboard Ultra

Following the full rollout of Ultra in the Fall of 2022, there were several reported technology incidents and complaints by faculty and students. ODE staff documented several incidents that resulted in loss of tool function, test failures, loss of data, and loss of access by users. Prompted by these concerns, in late Fall, ODE invited faculty and students to respond to surveys that were distributed via email. These surveys collected quantitative and qualitative feedback on a variety of items. The feedback from these surveys indicated widespread dissatisfaction with Blackboard Ultra. ODE's support team also expressed significant dissatisfaction with Blackboard technical support, and reported chronic instability of key tool functions in Ultra.

LMS Task Force

In January of 2023, ODE presented its findings to the AUM community in a town hall meeting, and recommended that the Provost appoint a representative task force to further research and make recommendations about the LMS situation at AUM. The Provost approved that recommendation, and an LMS Task Force was established. The following members served on the Task Force:

Erin Klash (College of Education)
