DEPARTMENT OF POLITICAL SCIENCE AND PUBLIC ADMINISTRATION

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS MINOR

15 Semester Hours – Five Courses

The International Relations Minor offers courses focusing on the institutions, structure, and policies of other countries, and how globalization, international law, international trade, economic and military power, international organizations, and various non-state and international actors affect what happens in countries as well as the relationships among them. Consequently, students interested in careers in international business, international finance, international development, law, public policy, diplomacy, and education will find the minor especially applicable to their training.
